

How to: ChatGPT for sales

5 prompts to save →

Quote Maker

Act like a highly skilled sales professional specializing in [your industry]. Perform the task of crafting an email to follow up on a recent meeting with a potential client, where you discussed their needs and how your software can address them. The email should be structured as a conversation starter, containing a brief recap of the meeting highlights, the proposed solution, and an attached detailed quote.

Adapt the tone and content to reflect an understanding of the client's specific industry challenges and how your [solution]. I shared them between ##.

context

context

Step 1: Explain your strategy.

Step 2: Explore different options on how to close effectively.

Step 3: Be creative & brainstorm multiple emails that could close differently.

Take a deep breath and work on this step by step.

Pre-call Research Phase

Act like a SaaS sales strategist helping me qualify leads and sharpen my outbound targeting.

The product I'm selling is:

→ [Insert SaaS service here]

Your tasks:

1. Why they care: Based on the nature of my SaaS, explain why companies might be interested in it. Give 3–5 concrete reasons.
2. Discovery questions: Give me a list of the top 7 questions to ask a potential client to figure out if they'd benefit from this product.
3. Disqualifiers: What types of companies shouldn't buy this SaaS? Give 3 clear red flags or DQ signals.
4. Perfect-fit buyers: Describe 3 ideal company profiles for this SaaS—industry, team size, pain points, tech stack, growth stage.
5. Lead ideas: Based on your output above, list 5–10 real companies (with names) that fit this ICP and could benefit from the product.

Think like a sales pro doing research before outbound.

Be concise, useful, and specific.

Cold Email Generator

Act like a top-performing SDR crafting cold emails that get replies. Use the prospect's LinkedIn profile summary, job title, and company description to write a 3-sentence cold email.

Your email must include a personalized hook, a clear value proposition, and a soft CTA. No fluff. No buzzwords. Just clarity.

Here's the data:

- Prospect: {{Name}}
- Title: {{Job Title}}
- Company: {{Company Name}}
- Summary: {{LinkedIn Summary}}

Write the email below.

Take a deep breath and work on this step by step.

LinkedIn Invitation Note

Act as an expert in sales messaging and LinkedIn outreach with 20+ years of experience writing personalized, high-converting connection notes for B2B professionals.

Your task: Write 1 short LinkedIn invite note that feels human, relevant, and non-salesy.

First, analyze the prospect's last LinkedIn post:

<post>

</post>

Then analyze their "About" section:

<about section>

</about section>

Also review their company website (find it online).

Next, brainstorm:

1. 10 completely different opening lines to start the message
2. 10 different CTAs (5 questions + 5 short statements, 3–5 words max, no fluff)

Use conversational, simple English, no jargon.

Think like a sharp SDR who actually cares.

Sales Objection Trainer

You're an expert sales coach skilled at handling objections with empathy and persuasion.

I'll give you a common sales objection a prospect might raise. For each objection, provide:

1. A short empathetic acknowledgment of their concern.
2. A persuasive response that addresses the objection clearly and confidently.
3. A smooth transition to keep the conversation moving forward.

Keep responses natural and human, avoiding salesy or robotic language. Make it feel like a real conversation where the prospect feels heard and understood.

Here's the objection:

"{{Insert objection here}}"

Take a deep breath and work on this step by step.

Found this helpful?

Repost it
to help one person
in your network.